

LONDON TO CAMBRIDGE BIKE RIDE

Sunday June 26th, 2011

Hardcore cyclists and keen amateurs slapped on the sun cream and rode off into the glorious sunshine for the JCC/Tzedek London to Cambridge charity bike ride on Sunday. Some 30 people got on their bikes to make the 57-mile ride organised in association with UJS and RSY.

Solomon Slade, social action and campaigns co-ordinator for the Hampstead-based Jewish Community Centre for London (JCC) said: "I couldn't have asked for anything more. There was such a collective spirit with just that hint of competition to keep people motivated and racing along.

"At the end everyone felt a real sense of achievement and we would like to thank all those who took part. We are still waiting for the final figure but we know we have raised thousands of pounds for some really important Tzedek projects based in India and Ghana and some of the JCC's core social action projects."

Frances Fogel, from Kentish Town, who took part for the second year, said: "An awesome cycle with the JCC and Tzedek that provided important challenges in terms of fundraising for worthy causes and testing us physically."

Rosella De Jong, from Belsize Park, finished with a sign of relief, saying : "I made it! I am really happy to have played a part in making the world a little bit of a better place."
